1. The attached translations, dated 25, 29 and 30 March 1949, refer to the reactivation of the Nicaraguan revolutionary movement in Costa Rica and Guatemala. The communications are from Ernesto Solorzano Thompson, Room 709, Hotel Roosevelt, New York City, who signs the letters with the pseudonym "E. Thomas."
2. Solorzano Thompson addressed General Emiliano Chamorro, 14 Calle Poniente 22, Guatemala City, in the letter of 25 March (see Enclosure B), and revealed that the Nicaraguan revolutionary leader is contemplating the purchase of two PBV-5A amphibious airplanes from an unnamed American firm dealing in surplus war planes.
3. The memorandum from Caracas (see Enclosure A) dated 4 February 1947 was originally written in English and was an enclosure in the letter to Chamorro as well as in Solorzano Thompson's letter of 30 March to "C. Gross." The latter is a pseudonym for Adolfo Ortega Diaz, a well-known Nicaraguan revolutionary now in San Jose for the purpose of taking charge of local remnants of the Nicaraguan revolutionary movement. Captain K. W. Oliver, writer of the memorandum, is described as a pilot for the Texas Oil Company and presumably the one who supplied Solorzano Thompson with this data on the PBV-5A.
4. In the letter of 29 March 1949 (see Enclosure C) Thompson wrote to Ortega Diaz at Apartado 1590, San Jose, Costa Rica. The reference to "Mr. Ram" may be an abbreviation for Ramirez, an allusion possibly to Miguel Angel Ramirez, exiled Dominican revolutionary prominent in Caribbean Legion activities. His identity is not otherwise made clear.
5. On 30 March (see Enclosure D) Solorzano Thompson wrote to Ortega Diaz at Apartado 1530, San Jose, Costa Rica, expressing his fears that censorship might prevent Chamorro from receiving Solorzano Thompson's letter. "Mr. Emmy Chamer" in this letter is presumably a reference to Emiliano Chamorro.
